ident is to put the presidency above other earthly prizes attainable by our future men, and to imply that the route to the presidency is a people's free highway. There is, in truth, no royal road to the white house, nor special privilege to any person or class that may have a fancy for it. What the law says as to the presidency is simplicity itself; merely that a president shall be a native-born citizen at least 35 years old, with a residence of not less than 14 years within the United States. and that he shall be elected by a majority of votes in the nation. There are millions of boys who in time will meet all these requirements but the last. The boys possess the wideopen field, and how wide it is may be judged from the distance between

In warm weather the St. Bernard dog will hunt the shadiest, coolest spot and if opportunity offer will rapidly excavate an underground retreat for himself in which he can wholly escape the heat of the sun. In the cool of the day, however, he is ready for any business or pleasure, from a swim in the nearest pond or river to a woodchuck hunt or a search for burglars. No noisy snappish fellow is he, forever with a chip on his shoulder, like so many small dogs-nor is his anger easily aroused, but "beware the fury of the patient-!" The sweetest Bernard ever born can fling aside his halo and punish his antagonist as joyfully as any bulldog, upon sufficient provocation, and he doesn't care to stop until his work is finished. A quies gentle watchman, he uses persuasion in preference to force and finally depends upon his weight rather than his teeth to settle matters in his favor.-Country Life in America.

The Wrong Helen.

Everyone smiled when the sentimental young guest said: "I think the name Helen is the most attractive in all this world." It was a family dinner. The pretty waitress began to blush. "Not because all Helens are beautiful," continued the youth, "but I believe I could love any woman if she had no other attraction than the name of Helen."

By this time everyone was laughing, and the waitress, covering her blushing face, bolted toward the door.

"What's the matter?" stammered the young man.

"The maid's name is Helen, that's all," replied his hostess .- N. Y. Press.

The Truth in a Nut Shell.

There are many people who imagine they are sick and others who really are clusively for our wealthy automobile sick but do not know the cause of their sickness. The former class patronize all kinds of fakirs and swallow every kind of a nostrum in the hope that relief will come to them for the imaginable sickness. The latter class, as a rule, patronize so-called specialists whom they never see except in imagination by means of a steryotyped letter usually prepared by an office girl. If you only imagine or really are sick consult Dr. B. M. Jackson who makes regular visits to Oregon every four weeks. Dr. Jackson spent 21 years in the different schools of Europe and America in order to perfect himself for the practice of his profession. Dr. Jackson is spoken of very highly and is appreciated by those he has and is treating. Consultation and examination is always free and strictly confi dential. Dr. Jackson's next visit to Oregon will be Tuesday, June 16, at Hotel Woodland.

A Mean Instruction.

The commencement exercises of the high school had passed off with entire success, and at the request of the principal the diplomas of the school had been delivered by Col. Wye, president of the school board, worthy but somewhat pompous citizen, to whom nothing had ever happened to shake his high opinion of himself.

At the close of the proceedings the principal, with the praiseworthy purpose of saying something complimentary to his eminent colaborer in the cause of education, took occasion to observe:

"You acquitted yourself finely, colonel. Your remarks were well chosen."

"Well chosen!" echoed the colonel, turning red. "I want you to understand, sir, that those remarks were not 'chosen' at all. Every word I uttered was original, sir!"-Youth's Companion.

New Fruits and Plants in Yucatan. The United States consul at Progreso says that the fields and gardens of Yucatan are filled with useful vegetables and fragrant herbs unknown to the outer world. In the cultivated fields are grown species of Indian corn. beans, squashes and tubers for which. in this country, we have no name, because we have never seen nor heard of them. In the forests and jungles grow wild fruits, already excellent in quality, which could be made delicious by scientific cultivation. Mr. Thompson, the consul, avers that there are half a score of wild fruits which offer more promising results to cultivation than ever did the bitter wild almond. which was the progenitor of the peach. There are six varieties of Indian corn in Yucatan, and the natives speak of this plant as "the grace of oGd."-Youth's Companion.

Western Cities Lively.

The eastern visitor finds the cities of the northwestern coast brimful of life, color, significance, picturesque interest; and though the forces which have combined in their making are somewhat similar, each has a distinct character and individuality. "Lively," a word of the west, may well be applied to them-a sort of brisk activity, youthfulness, ozone. They have the rather unusual capacity of doing big things and talking about them lustily at the same time. It is the cry of the street corners: "Just watch us grow. See us getting to the front."-Ray Stannard Baker, in Century.
